“ I met Casey in 1979 when my family moved from Florida to Alabama. Our new neighborhood was filled with kids and Casey, like me, was always outside doing something. We spent a lot of hours just hanging out, sitting on the curb, and dipping Copenhagen. Casey helped me adjust to my new school and neighborhood more than he ever knew just by being my friend, and I have never forgotten that. He was kind, considerate, loyal to a fault, and always did the right thing. We played the occasional game of yard football and he would knock your socks off when he tackled you. We also played stick ball (if you can believe that) in the street and that was a lot of fun. He could have been a really good football player (I told him that) but that wasn't really his thing. He introduced me to what we called heavy metal back in that day, Nazareth and early AC/DC. Casey had amazing eyes, you couldn't help but notice that, and I was always a little jealous of those eyes because you didn't have a chance around any girls if he was around. They also noticed those amazing eyes. Thank you Casey for being a loyal friend and for all the good memories. My thoughts and prayers go out to Kelly and all of Casey's family and freinds.

“ My memories of Casey lasted from a young age until he graduated in 1982 and they moved away from our neighborhood. I don't even know where to begin. We snuck out and would walk the neighborhood. We played baseball in Mr. Pope's yard. I remember painting his face as Paul Stanley just to walk around. We had good and bad times but at the end of the day, he was always there for my family. He and my mom would sit out on the back of my dad's truck and talk for hours if he needed to talk. He was very passionate about acting. I'll never forget our memories and know I'll see you again some day! Fly high friend!!!!

“ As young men, my dad and Casey's dad were best friends. They were Marine brothers and from the stories I have heard, they shared many good times together. When I was in 3rd grade, we moved to Kimbo Drive in Center Point. Shortly afterwards, the Camp family joined the neighborhood...right across the street. Casey and Kelly fit right in. Their names were perfect for our neighborhood! The kids on our street were named Casey, Tracey, Tracy, Kelly, Kelly, Kathy, Karen, Kim, Kerri and Carrie. This was before Crysta and Richard joined the family.

I have so many memories of Casey ... his blue eyes, his laugh, his energy, the way he looked when he was sad, but mostly, his extremely animated personality. He never just told you about a movie.. he acted it out with so much energy and life. I'll never forget when he told me about a Bruce Lee movie. Not only did he act the part of Bruce Lee, but also the part of his opponent - I was totally amazed watching him jumping, kicking, karate-chopping, and rolling all around my yard as he fought himself. If you knew Casey, you can picture this scene in you mind... and I bet you laugh. Also, I bet very few people knew that Casey could climb 30 feet up a pine tree before reaching the first limb and always did it barefoot.

Casey was the oldest of his siblings and always took on such a loving and caring roll as their "big brother". He never said it to me, but I could see how much he loved his brother and sisters. He was like their caregiver and protector. I admired that quality in him, even at such a young age.

The other side of Casey... the adult Casey... the part I learned about over the last several months as he was fighting for his life... is that he was a gentle man; a proud man; a loving man. He put others before himself. I recently heard his voice as he said everything is going to be okay; he shared his love over and over.

We are extremely saddened by the passing of such a selfless, loving man; but in Casey's own words to Sharon, the love of his life,

"Everything is going to be okay. I love you. I love you. I love you".

“ I knew Casey in high school and he was my roommate for a year in college. He was as good a friend as anyone could want, always had your back and was always generous with his time. He wasn't the most disciplined student, I remember times when I'd be going to bed and he'd be setting out for the night and the next day I'd be heading to breakfast and he'd come in and go to be, but he was and incredibly talented actor.

I high school I worked with him on Dark of the Moon and he was brilliant. In college he was Lucky in Waiting for Godot and was cast as the lead in the Purple show in 1986. He was so much fun.

I lost touch with him when he dropped out of Montevallo, but I thought about him a lot over the years. Good night sweet prince.

“ My heart is broken and I cry for you, brother. You were talented in many areas and more intelligent than anyone I ever knew. You could match wits with the best of them. Most of all, you were a faithful servant of the Lord, and a man of truth and integrity. I love you, brother and I hold your memories close in my heart.
