“ Scott you will never know how bad I miss you baby and I'm so sorry I couldn't hold you. This man was bigger than life itself and there's nothing he wouldn't do for anyone , even strangers. From helping little old ladies get into doors to being at a gas station and giving a man a hundred dollars because the man just lost his wife. That's the kind of man Scott was. There will never be another like him. I've seen him breakdown when reading articles of elderly couples being in love with each other for so long. This gentle giant of a man, tougher than nails had a heart bigger than Dallas. There was nothing more in life that he loved the most than being held. It was those nights he turned into a little boy. I told you years ago I would always love you and I mean it more today than back then. God what I wouldn't give to just hold you once more. I died when you died and nothing seems to stop the pain, but I'll see you again one day and we'll hold each other again. I love you Scott infinity x infinity.

“ When you are growing up, most kids learn to tie their shoes and ride a bike from their parents. This wasn't the case for me. My Uncle Scott taught me to do both. He taught me to ride my bike at Gram's and I'll never forget how proud he was once I got it. He never let me fall and cheered me on the entire time.

I'm going to miss seeing you drive by everyday and either honking your horn or yelling, "hey sissy" from your window. You marched to the beat of your own drum and I've always loved that about you. You will be missed. ❤️
