“Michelle, I miss you so much especially on Thursday afternoons. I missed you at the fair, but I think you were really there with us. I think of you often. There are so many little girls in the Michelle Farish dance class. You would smile with joy. They love dance, and they would have loved you. We give a special honor in your name at our recital. You would be so proud of the recipients. I am trying to be like you. Love and miss you. Jenny and all of the DMD dancers.

“Michelle, it's been a year, we miss you so much and it still doesn't seem real. 2013 was a year I never want to experience again, just too much sickness, hospitals and you going home. I still don't know why God had to call you home, we needed you here, we all do. You would love Little Dean, he's now a year old, walking, running and getting into everything. Hunter is in first grade, reading and doing great in math and science, he's so smart like Davie and Stephen. Lauren got married on August 31st. She looked so pretty and it was a beautiful day, even when it rained. The wedding was at the park on the mountain overlooking our valley. Mother had to be put back in the hospital this morning, her heart is acting up again, welcome her home when she comes to see you and Daddy. We love you baby, always in our hearts and forever in our minds. People have been so good, helpful and just remembering you and all you did for so many. Jenny has 38 in the little dance group, she couldn't believe how many had signed up. Victoria is getting so big, danced at the Shelby Co. fair last night. Nikki is working hard at Bama. She is so much like you. Morgan will finish school in December, then the real work begins. Courtney has been selected as class beauty again this year for homecoming, and made the dance line, one of only three freshmen. My two little hummingbirds are still with us and feeding. They come up to the den sliding glass doors like they are trying to get in. They are so pretty. Dance my daughter!!! Dance for all of us.

“ I know you are at peace; no more pain or sickness. I would prefer that you were still here, but you were called up to blaze a trail for the rest of us to follow. Life is not measured by the number of years, but how well you lived them. Your legacy is all the people that you touched with your infectious smile, moral character and lives you helped shape through dance. Unknown to you is that through your courage and sacrifice, you led me back to God. I have never prayed so hard as I did that final week. I hold no ill will toward God for taking you from us...apparently the angels needed dance lessons! I love you, I miss you, and I look forward to your warm embrace in paradise. You'll always be with me, Big Sis, and my children will know their Aunt Michelle. You have my word.

“ To the Farish family, I stood and looked at Michelle, laying in her final place of rest. She was so beautiful, and not the Michelle we saw suffering. I will always remember our dance memories, for there are so many. I will miss our chats. I will miss seeing her pull out a baton from her big bag, for someone who didn't have one, or forgot theirs. I hope we can all become the sweet and bright ray of sunshine that Michelle was to our dance staff and to the dancers whose lives she touched. I will miss you standing by my side in the gym, motioning for me to not open the curtains yet at recital, and running on stage to tie a shoe. I will miss you, but you left your mark on my life. “ ~Dedicated to Mrs. Michelle Farish~To the person who taught me how to twirl a baton,the person who always smiled,the person who cared for others,the person who could brighten up anyone's day,the person who is no longer here:You have caused smiles throughout this world,you have changed so many lives.From the tiny dancers you taught,to the older girls you used to.Even if someone just met you,or knew you forever,you could still make them smile. 16 years we've had you,and now me must let you go.We're all going to shed tears,we'll try to smile for you.No go teach the angels to dance,and spread your rays of sunshine to the world.
