“ To My Dear Husband, I know I have to say good-bye for now. You were, to me, the most selfless and giving person I've ever known. It was always about me and the kids. As long as we were taken care of and happy you were happy. The thing I learned from you was how to be a genuine person. Always be yourself no matter who you are around. You were misjudged quite a bit in your 51 almost 52 years on this earth. But God knew your heart and so did I. That's why I admired you so much. Your heart was genuine and true. My heart is broken into a million pieces and I never knew a person could feel so much pain, it's unbearable. I pick up my phone and it is supposed to be you. I wake up in the morning, you are not there. I see your favorite show on t.v. but you are not here to watch it. My eyes search for you, my heart longs to feel your arms around me to protect me, but they are gone. I want to hear your voice say "Babe, I love you!", there is nothing but silence and void. What am I suppose to do between here and when I am with you again? Your Loving Wife, Rita
